Drake Completes RenueRedi Program

Drake State celebrates the successful completion of its RenueRedi Entrepreneurship Program, an initiative designed to empower aspiring entrepreneurs and strengthen existing businesses through targeted business development, innovation, and entrepreneurial training.

The program brought together entrepreneurs representing both new and established ventures who worked closely with Drake State and CNI Solutions to develop strategies for growth, sustainability, and long-term success.

Through a 21-week course that included hands-on instruction, mentorship, and practical business planning, participants gained valuable tools and resources to strengthen their businesses and prepare for future opportunities. The program hosted 38 participants over 3 cohorts. The RenueRedi Entrepreneurship Program was established following Drake State's receipt of an Innovate Alabama Network Grant in 2023.

AAMU Alum Key Part of Stevie Wonder Tour

Dr. Henry Panion III, University Professor of Music at the University of Alabama at Birmingham (also an Alabama A&M University alumnus), will conduct and arrange for Stevie Wonder's upcoming 10-country tour.

The phenomenal singer's "Songs in the Key of Life 50th Anniversary Tour" is scheduled to begin in Birmingham UK on October 13.

After several performances in the United Kingdom, the tour will continue in the United States on November 19. After performances in Chicago, Washington and Detroit (two shows), the tour's final performance will be in Los Angeles.

For the upcoming performances,

Dr. Panion (above, right) will serve as a conductor and arranger, sustaining a musical relationship with the legendary Wonder that extends beyond 34 years.

"To have worked with Stevie has been one of the great honors of my professional life," said Panion, calling the work a musical landmark. "... To help bring this music to audiences around the world 50 years later is both humbling and exhilarating."

Here are the top issues and events in Washington, D.C., for this week:

1. CONGRESS. The Senate is in session this week, while the House is out until Nov. 8. On Monday, the Senate moved to final passage on the bill to regulate college athletes' "name, image, and likeness" (NIL) rights. The Senate was then expected to make a 2nd attempt to take up Sen. Husted's (R-OH) bill to prevent residential and small-business utility customers from paying for the electrical grid and power-generation upgrades triggered by large data centers (the House passed the bill on Sept. 16 by a 417-3 vote). The Senate will also debate a privileged Democratic resolution requiring the State Department to report to Congress on increasing violence in the West Bank, and may then take up a bipartisan bill from Sens. Bernie Moreno (R-OH) and Elissa

Slotkin (D-MI) that would ban the sale of Chinese cars in the U.S.

Last Friday, Senate Appropriations Committee Chair Susan Collins (R-ME) condemned the Trump administration's sudden $810 million pocket rescission as an "unlawful cancellation" to claw back $810 million in congressionally approved funding days before the end of the federal fiscal year on Sept. 30, including $567 million from Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) programs aiding refugees, asylum-seekers, and minority businesses.

2. EXECUTIVE BRANCH. On his way to last Saturday's college football game between Texas and Tennessee in Knoxville, TN, the President rejected an Iranian proposal to restart peace talks (which reportedly would have allowed Iran to control the Strait of Hormuz). On Sunday, he traveled to Chicago to attend the final round of the President's Cup golf tournament. On Tuesday, the President and House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) hosted a meeting with technology CEOs to discuss artificial intelligence. This week, he will travel to Oklahoma and Alabama to participate in campaign events.

3. SUPREME COURT. Last Friday, in a 7-page opinion issued just 39 days before the Mid-Term Elections, the Supreme Court granted a White House petition, clearing the way for the Trump administration to proceed with its plan to use a modified, centralized Homeland Security Department database to verify voters' citizenship. Also on Friday, for the 3rd time this month, the Court handed Democrats a win in Missouri by reinstating the state's 6R/2D congressional map over the 7R/1D map favored by the GOP.

One week from Monday (Oct. 5), the Supreme Court will reconvene for its 2026-27 term. The first case argued will be Suncor Energy v. Commissioners of Boulder County, a lawsuit in which a Colorado county seeks millions of dollars from oil and gas companies for their alleged role in worsening climate change.

4. EDUCATION. Education Secretary Linda McMahon is expected to release a final regulation soon outlining how the Trump administration will enforce Title IX, the federal law that bars sex-based discrimination in education. Earlier this month, the White House Office of Management and Budget cleared the Department to publish the rule, which restores the Title IX regulation from President Trump's first term and formally rescinds the Biden-era rules. In a video released over the weekend, McMahon called it "a full return to Title IX" and cited "boys in boys sports and girls in girls sports." The full text and publication date have not yet been announced, but her remarks suggest the rule may go beyond simply reversing the Biden interpretation.

Colleges and universities should be ready to review their Title IX policies and athletics compliance once the rule is published.

Opening Doors Through Education

In my continuing series on people who are Making Impact and Building Legacy in our community, I am pleased to recognize Dr. Earnest Davis, whose years of service have helped open doors of educational opportunity for countless individuals throughout Huntsville and North Alabama.

Dr. Davis has served for many years as President/ Executive Director of the North Alabama Center for Educational Excellence (NACEE) in Huntsville. NACEE is an educational-access organization serving North Alabama, with roots in the federal Educational Opportunity Center movement. Its central mission is helping underrepresented individuals prepare for, enter and succeed in post-secondary education.

What makes Dr. Davis's story particularly compelling is the challenge he faced when he assumed leadership. NACEE had lost its U.S. Department of Education funding in 2003 following an Inspector General audit. I was actually serving on the NACEE Board when Dr. Davis was hired as the new executive director. Under his leadership, NACEE regained federal funding in 2004. He did not simply inherit a successful organization; he helped lead it through recovery and into renewed service, expanding programs and opportunities throughout North Alabama.

Dr. Davis has devoted much of his professional life to helping students—particularly those who are underserved or may be the first in their families to pursue higher education—see college not simply as a dream, but as an achievable goal.

His work reminds us that education can change the trajectory of a life. Through college-access programs, mentoring, academic preparation and outreach, Dr. Davis and NACEE have helped young people and adults navigate pathways to post-secondary education. His commitment has also extended to our veterans, helping those who served our nation prepare for educational opportunities after military service.

But Dr. Davis's impact reaches far beyond the walls of one organization. His record of community service reflects a remarkable commitment to education, leadership and opportunity. He has served, advised and supported the Delta Theta Lambda Education Foundation of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.; 100 Black Men of America—Madison County as an Educator Resource Partner; First Missionary Baptist Church as Chairman of the Board of Deacons; Huntsville Housing Authority; HEALS; Leadership Huntsville; the African American Chamber of Commerce, where he served as Board Chair; and the Beulah Ballard Toney Foundation. He is also a Life Member of the Alabama A&M University Alumni Association.

Dr. Davis has shared his knowledge through workshops and programs with the Sun Set Social Club and local chapters and members of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., and Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc. Just as importantly, he has maintained longstanding advisory and consulting relationships with some of our region's most important institutions of higher education, including Alabama A&M University, J.F. Drake State Community and Technical College, The University of Alabama in Huntsville, Oakwood University, and Calhoun Community College.

When you consider the breadth of those relationships, a pattern emerges: Dr. Davis has spent his career connecting people, education and opportunity. There is something especially meaningful about leaders who do not need the spotlight to make a difference. Their names may not always dominate the headlines, but their fingerprints are everywhere—in the student who becomes the first college graduate in a family, the veteran who begins a new chapter, and the young person who discovers that someone believes in his or her potential.

That is impact. And when those individuals go forward to educate, employ, mentor and encourage others, that impact becomes legacy.

Dr. Earnest Davis has spent years opening doors so that others might walk through them. Huntsville is a stronger community because of leaders who understand that one of the greatest investments we can ever make is an investment in people.

Dr. Earnest Davis, thank you for making an impact and building a legacy—one student, one family and one opportunity at a time.

Today's Spiritual Game Plan: "Whose Side Are You On?"

First John 3:10 says, "This is how we know who the children of God are and who the children of the devil are: Anyone who does not do what is right is not God's child, nor is anyone who does not love their brother and sister."

When I was growing up, my great-grandmother would always ask me, "Whose side are you on?" This meant was I on God's side or the devil's side, to which I would reply, "I am on God's side." I believe she understood that the struggle that we all face between good and evil is real and that is why she asked the question.

Living in the state of Alabama, it is inevitable that you will be asked the question, "Whose side are you on?" In other words, do you pull for Alabama or do you pull for Auburn? The reason for the question is that this is one of the great rivalries of college football. When these teams play, there is a lot at stake, like bragging rights for a whole year. Unfortunately, there is much more at stake when it comes to the decision to follow Jesus or to follow the devil. This will decide where you will spend eternity. We all need to realize that we are being influenced by God or by the devil.

When we decide to follow the devil, we end up with a lot of broken promises. For example, the devil will promise us pleasure, but he brings us misery. He promises us fun but in the long run he brings us guilt and shame. He promises us life but he brings death. First John 3:8 says the reason the Son of God appeared was to destroy the devil's work. However, we have to choose whose side we are on. God will not interfere with our free will. The choice is ours. Once we make the decision to follow Jesus, He will strengthen us toward the direction that He wants us to take. Remember, Jesus will always meet us where we are but He refuses to leave us that way. When we choose to follow Christ, we will have all the bragging rights that we need because we can say with full confidence that we are children of God

May God grant you spiritual success in choosing the right side to follow.
Question: What can you do to make sure that you are choosing the right path to follow?

Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters, and make sure you purchase a copy of my books, Spiritual Game Plans for A Successful Life and A Champion Game Plan for Life, at amazon.com TODAY!

What Are You Reaping This Fall, the Season of Harvest?

This marks the first full week of autumn—a season with deep leadership lessons for us as REEL people—Recovering Egoholics and Emerging Leaders.

Our Four Leadership Seasons

An Enemy Called Average author John L. Mason reminds us that seasons aren't just dates on a calendar, but carry leadership lessons:

Winter is hibernation. Growth is happening underground—but growth nonetheless. Some of our best ideas are forming here.

Spring breaks up the fallow ground, plants seeds that will one day blossom. It's uncomfortable but they need growth.

Summer's heat refines like a furnace, separating the dross from the gold or silver.

And then comes Fall—where we gather in the harvest of all that came before.

Leadership, like Farming, is Seasonal

You can't skip the process. Each season sets up the next. And my question to you—and to myself—is simple:

What are we harvesting in this season?

Did we plant the right seeds?

Did we do the right kind of weeding—removing distractions, cutting back what was choking growth?

Did we water faithfully—staying consistent when nobody was watching?

Did we allow the natural sunlight, winds, and rains—the stresses of life—to grow us instead of break us?

Make no mistake: what we're harvesting now results directly from what we planted and tended earlier.

Harvesting the WHO

An old Chinese Proverb says:

If you are planning for a year, sow rice.

If you are planning for a decade, plant trees.

But if you are planning for a lifetime, cultivate people.

That's leadership harvesting. Yes, projects and accomplishments matter. But our real leadership test is the people we cultivate.

For those of us who are REEL, the harvest isn't just about what we did, but about who we've grown.

Fall isn't just about celebration. It's also about preparation.

Preparing for the next winter of hidden growth.

Preparing for the next spring of planting new seeds.

Preparing for the next summer of refining heat.

So that come Fall 2026, we will reap a harvest like never before.

That's the rhythm. That's the leadership cycle.

So, again: What are you harvesting this fall?

Not just in your projects, not just in your career, but in the people around you.

Fall is not just a season to harvest—it's a season to prepare for the next winter, spring, and summer.

Until next time, Enjoy the Harvest.

Millennial Moment

by Gloria B. Caldwell

Hold Them or Fold Them ...

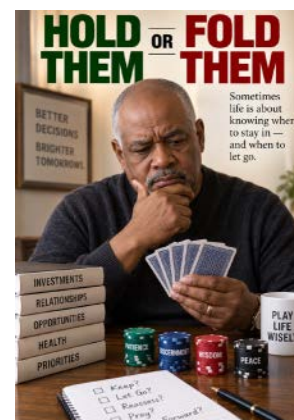

You're in the middle of a dilemma. Hardship has come, relationships have gone sour, a job is stressful, you're just tired.

There was an old song by Kenny Rogers called, "The Gambler." Now, he was talking about cards, but there were some life points in there.

When and how do you get yourself emotionally balanced to make a decision about any situation? When do you stand versus walk away?

Making a challenging decision can be difficult, I have some steps to help you find emotional balance and make the best choice for yourself:

- 1. Take a step back: Self-reflect. This will help you gain perspective and clarity.
- 2. Assess your emotions: Acknowledge and understand your emotions ... are they genuine or clouded?

3. Evaluate the situation:

Take a thorough look at the factors contributing to your dilemma. Think about your values and priorities.

4. Seek support ... but be mindful, everyone isn't in your corner and doesn't have your best interest at heart.

5. Listen to your intuition: Weigh the rational analysis with your gut feelings.

6. Consider long-term implications: What will the effects of your decision be?

7. Set boundaries. And, finally, take action: Once you have weighed all the factors and considered your emotions, it's time to make a decision. Trust yourself, accept that there may be uncertainties. You may need to just stand or "hold 'em." You may need to walk away, and fold them.

Remember, decision making is rarely easy, especially during challenging times. Give yourself grace, be patient, and know that it's okay to reassess, if needed. It's a New Year, let's make growth decisions.

God loves you, and so do I.

Rosetta James Foundation "Spotlight on Our Elders" ... Featuring

Mrs. Loretta Spencer

Mayor Loretta Purdy Spencer graduated from the University of Alabama in 1959 with a B.S. degree in elementary education.

She returned to Huntsville to teach fifth grade at Fifth Avenue School. Spencer spent the next 30 years focused on volunteerism, most notably as the president of boards, such as The Boys and Girls Club, The Senior Center, The Botanical Gardens, and as chair of the Huntsville Planning Commission.

While chairman, she helped develop Cummings Research Park West, the second largest research park in the United States.

In 1996, Spencer was elected as the first female mayor of Huntsville, as well as the first woman to be elected mayor of a large city in Alabama. She served three terms as mayor and is credited with such accomplishments as bringing the Toyota V-8 Engine Plant, the Target Distribution Center, the downtown Embassy Suites Hotel, Bridgestreet Town Centre and a host of retail businesses to Huntsville, as well as beginning the revitalization of the downtown area.

She has received a multitude of awards and much recognition for her vision and leadership. Since leaving office, Spencer continues to contribute her time and resources to many worthwhile organizations, including the Army Space and Missile Defense Board (ASMDA), the Huntsville Symphony Orchestra Board, the Community Free Clinic, The Calhoun College Foundation Board and the Hudson Alpha Institute for Biotechnology.

"Spotlight on Our Elders" is a weekly feature sponsored by the Rosetta James Foundation to promote volunteerism and activism in our community among those who are 70-plus. Alum Helps to Bring Back a Bulldog Tradition

Seventeen years after the music stopped, Dusk 2 Dawn is coming back.

The longtime Alabama A&M University tradition will make its return during Homecoming 2026, reviving the all-night alumni pep rally and after-party that generations of Bulldogs remember as part of the Homecoming experience.

And for alumnus Branden Gaddis, the return is personal.

Gaddis, who graduated from AAMU in 2013 with a degree in telecommunications and a minor in marketing, was a freshman the last time Dusk 2 Dawn was held in 2009. On Thursday, Oct. 15, he will return to The Hill not simply as an alumnus attending the celebration, but as one of its hosts.

The Renaissance Orchestra will be featured at Dusk 2 Dawn, the all-night alumni pep rally and after-party, Thursday, Oct. 15, at the AAMU Event Center. The Renaissance Orchestra will be featured at Dusk 2 Dawn, the all-night alumni pep rally and after-party, Thursday, Oct. 15, at the AAMU Event Center.

Gaddis will share the microphone with fellow alumnus and fraternity brother Craig "Moolah" Mitchell as Dusk2Dawn begins at 10 p.m. at the AAMU Event Center. The event will also feature entertainment from the Renaissance Orchestra.

"The last time we experienced it was during my freshman year in 2009, and I fondly remember the incredible energy, fun and sense of community," Gaddis said.

That energy — and the opportunity to introduce it to a new generation of Bulldogs — is what excites him most about its return.

"What I am most looking forward to is seeing every generation come together, bridging the gap to share in an experience like no other," he said.

A&M Earns National Accreditation for Environmental Health Program

Alabama A&M University's Environmental Health program has reached a major milestone, earning full national accreditation following a comprehensive review of its curriculum, faculty expertise, student learning outcomes, resources and preparation of future environmental health professionals.

The National Environmental Health Science and Protection Accreditation Council (EHAC) voted Aug. 1 to grant initial accreditation to AAMU's Bachelor of Science in Environmental Science, Environmental Health concentration. The six-year accreditation is effective through August 2032.

The designation marks the first time AAMU's Environmental Health concentration has earned EHAC accreditation and places the University among a select group of institutions nationally.

"This accreditation places Alabama A&M University among a select group of institutions nationally," said Dr. Elica M. Moss, program coordinator for Environmental Science and the Environmental Health concentration. "AAMU is the only University in Alabama with an EHAC-accredited undergraduate Environmental Health program and one of only three HBCUs nationally with an EHAC-accredited undergraduate Environmental Health program."

When undergraduate and graduate programs are considered together, AAMU is one of only five HBCUs nationwide with an EHAC-accredited Environmental Health program. Earning accreditation required

AAMU to complete an extensive self-study examining its curriculum, faculty qualifications, student learning outcomes, resources, experiential learning opportunities and overall program effectiveness.

The process also included an on-campus site visit during which EHAC representatives met with faculty, students and administrators and evaluated the program and University resources.

For students, the accreditation provides national recognition that their education meets established standards for environmental health education and professional preparation.
